

VOLUME NINE

KINFOLK

DISCOVERING NEW THINGS TO COOK, MAKE AND DO

URBAN LOUNGING: A LESSON FROM THE DANES

Photographs by Anders Schoneman Styling by Nathalie Schwer

SLAPPE MEANS RELAX IN DANISH, AND WE THINK THESE COPENHAGEN NATIVES KNOW HOW IT SHOULD BE DONE. WHETHER YOU'RE LOOKING FOR PLACES TO NAP, DAYDREAM, EAT ICE CREAM OR READ A GREAT NOVEL IN THE BIG CITY, HERE ARE SOME IDEAS FOR YOU.

KICK BACK

Sitting on a bench alone seems like an egregious waste of space. When there's no one around to share your seat with, take advantage of the momentary solitude by sprawling out, shutting your eyes and enjoying a moment of peace in a bustling city.

GO OUT ON A LIMB

Trees grow in cities to remind us that outside the walls we build there are creations far superior to the limits of man. So instead of reading on your concrete stoop this Sunday, put on a fearless toddler-size grin, find some knobby branches and get climbing.

DRINK UP

Including coworkers in a post-shift beverage is a great way to forge more meaningful (and tasty) relationships with the people you share a daily slog with. Make it a Friday afternoon tradition by starting the weekend with a spiked milkshake, two straws to each parfait glass.

FIND THE WATER

Nothing clears your head like being near water. Walk along a canal. Take a ferry connecting two cities. Even just parking yourself next to a big fountain will help wash away your worries.

SHARE

TWITTER / FACEBOOK / PINTEREST

TAGS

COPENHAGEN / ENTERTAINING IDEAS / PHOTOGRAPHS / URBAN LOUNGING